Life, Health and Beauty.

Dr Dio Lewis tells in his lectures by what habits and practices the human family can be preserved in lite, health and beauty. He particularly dwells upon the necessity of cle uning the teeth. It the teeth were kept clean there was no danger of dicay, even were the food of the most mixed and trashy kind. Clean teeth were now growing fashionable, and in a boarding-school containing, one hundred and fifty ladies of the higher classes which the doctor had visited there was but one young lady with a decay of tooth and not a single young lady with an artificial one. Yet these Idies belonging as they did to first-class families, were nurtured on the richest of food, notwith standing which their teeth were preserved white and undecayed by cleanh ness. 1863, Mrs. Abby Gooch took for her third husband a Scotch shoemaker named. Monroe, she huving at that time a comfortable personal property, and living very needy in a good home of her own. List year the shoemaker conceived the idea that some money had been left to him by a deceased relative in Scotland, and, to enable him to go thirther after it she sold nearly all that she had and equipped him for a first class foreign journey. Off he went and was not only gone longer than at first anticipated but wrote to her for more money as the means of his return. The poor woman worked night and day at tailoring to honor this demand, and when the traveled shoemaker did come track, it was without money and only, to resume

By the arrival of the steamer Merrimae from Rio Janeiro we have some information about the dreadful condition of Paraguay. The country is one vast ruin. Towns were depopulated, and the people are literally strving. There are thorsands living on roots and whatever fruit they can find; 20,000 willowed women are langing about "Assunciam" vanly striving to proceed passage to Buchus Ayro on Motte-one Cangs of deserters are prowling through the country robbing and murdering Lopez is safe in the mountains, succored by the Indians, but the Brazdians hold possession of the whole country with that exception.

Peaks and points, and towers and pinnacles and domes; shapes of beauty, shapes of grace, shapes of majesty and power; these carved in the whitest of granite, and those alone above the vast sea of darkness tipped by the rising glory of the moon, and fairly glittering in its light. Marvelous seene! I stood still and let it penetrate me; I was not crushed by it. Something within me, in heart or brain; swelled, and swelled till the walls felt as though they might give way; something that oried: "I am greater than this; before them my essence was; above them, beyond them, can I now soar; when these shall go; when the lheavens above them shall roll together like a satell, sid all the earth beneath them shall melt with fervent heat, and these vanish into nothingness, I shall live and grow. RIGHTS MOVEMENT. What this movement really signifies is, that the woman of to-day is trying to keep step with the man of to-day; to march with the onward march of the race; trying to go hand in hand with you, brain with brain, heart with heart, up to the heights you are clambering; desiring not to be abandoned in the valleys you are descriting and leaving behind. That is all this movement really sienifies; that is what serting and leaving behind. That is all this movement really signifies; that is what the future will recognize it to signify; and when stripped of all extraneous issues, it melt with fervont heat, and these vanish into nothingness, I shall live out grow, and go on from height to height, outquiering and to conquer, for the spirit of that has created me, and the breast of the Almighty has given me life."

Since these things are so, since He has made us in His own image, but a little lower than the angels, and crowned us with honor and glory, see to it, women who listen to me, as God him-slf hach commanded, that no mun take your crown. their names shouted by the applause of the populace, or seek the goal of all neen-fame; but it is true that that these women, lett to themselves, would se-lect home, wifehood and brother-hood for their portion; it is equally true that what society needs to-day is wifehood and motherhood; else why the growing charges against marriages in America; else why the declarations against this or that avenue to honorable independence, that it must be shut against woman because she chooses to undertake to do anything that man does. a mother's hand! Why all this? It is matural for a w man to necept wifehood and motherho for her portion, it is unnatural for her accept such wifehood and motherhood, in too many cuses is offered her to-day. It is while society contantly advises motherhood with its lips, it as constantly degrades and stilles the advice with its acts, I see the young girl, clear-oped, with unworn face, without experience, looking on when he comes home from his daily toil.

It is in slipply monstrous! It is no wontown. It is a bigot. It is no wontown. It is a mad enthusiast. But, at them in such sisten, that they could be at them in such sisten, that they could comprehend what I had to say, and that it came from no idle or indifferent entrosity. It is no wontown and another, and another, spoke after these words: Said I to one, "Were you married in England?" "No," was at the reply, "I was married here—no, I was a married in St. Jo." "Doubtless you knew or of polygamy when you left England?" "No," when my husband brought me to this city, and took me to his home, I found there a woman who had been lost to family and friends for fonrteen years, who had been my second mother through my babyhood and while I was a young girl. I stood face to face with my aunt." I said, "No," she replied, "she was not."

"Did she learn to be at any time?" "She dided soon." Something in the woman, who had been was accessful at the one age as at the other, but if one age as at the other, but alle and be as in telligent and as successful. ful at the one age as at the other, but she has not grown at home; she has not quokened her brain, deepened her thought and intellect one iota; but society says "Well done," the less of that the better; the less strength of mind and courage; the less of indepen-dence; the less of brain power, you have dence; the less of brain power, you have the more seemingly, the more certain—for mark you, there is a pivot on which it all turns—the more certain are you to keep your husband's affections at your side. This is what the girl hears; and what does she see? She sees the young man of twenty—two is very fond of being with this girl of twenty; he likes to talk with this girl of twenty; he likes to talk with her; to make her a confident of his plans; to discuss with her hundreds of things besides the soft, sweet experiences of love; she finds this man of twenty-two all devotion and attention.
